THREE HOUSES BURN. LOSS ESTIMATED $9,000.

Three handsome bungalows and a cottage, located on the first view school grounds in east part of town, were destroyed by fire Thursday noon, the blaze being discovered in the unoccupied bungalow owned by S. L. Dodds. How the fire started has never been ascertained, but it is supposed to have started in the kitchen. The three houses, finished during the summer.

The largest bungalow was purchased a short time ago from Mr. Dr. H. E. Prather, who owned the property, and it was one of the prettiest homes in town. They had just a month in the home. The fire started down a corridor to a new quarters. There was no such thing as a fire with our equipment, as a strong breeze blowing and the water in that vicinity is never used. The fire spread rapidly from house to another. There were a mass of people responded and immediately. A good portion of the lower portion of the Prather home was destroyed upstairs, to the kitchen equipment, and the other houses were

NOTED FIRE CHIEF HERE. MAKES RECOMMENDATIONS.

Maj. Fillmore Tyson, ex-fire chief of Louisville, now representing the Ahrens-Fox Fire Engine Co., was here this week in the interest of his firm and to make a survey of local conditions as regards our needs in the way of a fire engine. The major is probably the best known fire chief in the country and is a man of recognized ability along these lines, therefore what he has to say is worth consideration.

He was frank to say that Hickman, as a whole, was unusually hazardous from a point of fire. Hickman College, he said, was our most dangerous fire-trap and should, by all means, be provided with some form of fire escapes. Statistics show that twelve school buildings burn each year in the United States, with great loss of life in many instances.

In a meeting with the city's fire engine committee and others, Maj. Tyson outlined the needs of Hickman as he saw them. He was of the opinion we did not need an engine of as great capacity as we were figuring on; in fact, the capacity of our water mains did not warrant the large type of engine. His company has an engine of the smaller type that will develop 300 pounds pressure at the nozzle of a hose attached to a hydrant with only 12 pounds pressure. It is not the quantity of water used but force that counts in fire-fighting; the same theory one observes in fighting a grass fire with a broom or wet sack. Many other points were brought out which the laymen had overlooked.

At a meeting of the council Monday night, it was decided to issue the bonds and advertise for bids on same, to be opened Dec. 15th. These bonds are to be in denominations of $500 each, with 6 per cent interest payable annually. The city fathers will push the fire engine proposition as rapidly as the legal wheels will turn. This means we may get the machine some time in January.

CORN CROP NEARLY GATHERED.

The farmers of Mississippi county are finishing gathering what is probably the largest crop of corn ever produced in the county. The increased acreage of corn caused much new ground to be placed in corn, and in some localities the yield has been as high as 80 bushels per acre. Conservative estimates place the average yield at about 50 bushels per acre.

The sunflower and cotton crops have been harvested and the returns were gratifying, although less cotton was planted last season owing to the drop in price. The sunflower crop has taken its place with the leading products of the county. Charleston Republic.

It seems that law and officers are powerless to control the wholesale homicide business of the west section of Fulton county. Chester Stowe is the latest victim of the deadly, ready gun. Since the day of the State primary, Aug. 6th, there have been ten men killed in this county—six by gun fire. Last someone question this statement, we will give the names of those killed: Bert Wallace, Walter Allison, Judge W. A. Naylor, Willie Calhoun, Claude Johnson, Earl Lee, Chester Stowe, all white men, and the following negroes: unknown negro killed on Lee Lane boat, Arthur Madrox and Buster Hayden. This is an appalling number of killings for the length of time, especially in the smallest county of the State and worse still, all in the west end, except one, the negro Slayden, killed by the police of Fulton. In most cases, rotten whiskey and good revolvers are the prime causes of the murders. Both the bootlegger and the gun toter are dangerous men. Kentucky ought to have a law to make both crimes of such magnitude that the offenders could not get off with less than five years in the penitentiary. Some drastic action must be taken or the situation will become worse and worse. Bloody Breathitt is becoming known as a quiet, civilized county compared with the reputation we are getting abroad. Of the two, statistics prove Fulton county the worst. Shall we let it continue?

HAMBLETT SEEMS TO HAVE LOST HIS RACE.

On the day of the return, received at the office of the Secretary of State, Judge James P. Lewis, the Republican candidate for Secretary of State, has an apparent majority over Hon. Thomas Hamblett, the Democratic candidate, of 112, but the vote of several counties is being contested. Suits have been filed to prevent the counting of some portion of the vote returned, and it will not be known certainly who is successful in obtaining the office until these suits are disposed of. Each county is being gone over with a 'fine comb'. Fulton county was asked Monday to certify to her official vote, but in the absence of some of the old time cronies, the vote was the same.

It seems that a recent order of the Fiscal Court concerning road work in this county has been entirely misconstrued. In justice to the members of the court and as a matter of information, it might be said this order was solely for the purpose of getting the greatest amount of improvement for the least amount of money. In substance, the order makes it necessary for any one doing road work to first get authority from the magistrate of his district, then go ahead. The idea seems to have gone out that the court was letting up on road work, but such is not the case. Members of the court inform the Courier that at all times now is the time they want to work the highways—get them in shape for winter. This they want to do, however, for us little money as is necessary to do the work right. The new order merely places the road work on a business system. As the taxpayers look to the magistrates and county judge for results, it is only right that they should have the matter well in hand and know before the work is done (instead of afterwards, as under the old system), what ought to be done and what it will cost. The only change in the road improvement campaign is that road workers must first get the O. K. of the magistrate of the district before doing the work he proposes.

A FOOL AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR
M'CUTCHEON,
Author of "Graustark,"
"Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr M'CUTCHEON.

A full minute passed before I grasped the meaning of that soft answer, and then it was too late. He had gone about his business without waiting to see whether my wrath had been turned away. I had been joy riding!

The excitement in Britton's usually superstitious countenance as he came running up to me from the telephone closet prepared me in a way for the startling news that was to come.

"Has anything serious happened?" I cried, my heart sinking a little lower.

"I had Mr. Popendyke himself on the wire, sir. What do you think, sir?"

A premonition! "She—she has arrived!" I demanded dully.

He nodded. "She's as, sir. Mrs.—your mother, sir, is in your midst." The proximity of the impulsive manager explains this extraordinary remark on the part of my valet. We both glared at the manager, and he had the decency to move away. "She arrived by a special train at 12 last night, sir."

I was speechless. The brilliant sunshine seemed to be turning into somber light before my eyes. Everything was going black.

"She's asleep, he says, and doesn't want to be disturbed till noon, so he says he can't say anything more just now over the telephone because he's afraid of waking her." (Britton drops them when excited.)

"He doesn't have to shout so loud that he can be heard on the top floor," said I, still a trifle dazed.

"She appears to be sleeping in your bed, sir, he says."

"In my bed? Good heavens, Britton, what's to become of me?"

"Don't take it so hard, sir," he made haste to say. "Hitchford has fixed a place for you on the couch in your study, sir. It's all very snug, sir."

"But, Britton," I said in horror, "suppose that I should have come home last night. Don't you see?"

"I shrewdly she 'ad the door locked, sir," he said.

"She appears to be sleeping in your bed, sir, he says."

"By special train," I mumbled. A light broke in upon my revolving intellect. "Why, it was the train that went through at a mile a minute while we were in the coffee house. No wonder we didn't meet her!"

"I shudder to think of what would have happened if we had, sir," said he, meaning no doubt to placate me. "Mr. Popendyke says the countess has been up all night worrying about you, sir. She has been distracted. She wanted 'im to go out and search for you at 4 o'clock this morning, but he says he answered 'er you'd turn up all right. He says Mrs.—the elderly lady, begging your pardon, sir—thought she was doing for the best when she took a special. She wanted to save us all the trouble she could. He says she was very much distressed by our failure to have some one meet her with a hitch when she got here, and that she As it was, she didn't reach the castle until nearly 1 and she looked like a drowned rat when she got there being her exposed to a heavy rain storm. And what I mean. She went to bed in a dreadful state, he says, but he thinks she'll be more pleased to fore the day is over.

I burst upon him a question. "How say?" I shouted excitedly. "Well, by Jove, I don't feel half as bad as I did five minutes ago. I come for us be off."

We started busily down the street. My spirits were beginning to rebound. Popendyke had said that she worried all night about me. She had been distracted. Poor little woman! Still I was glad to know that she had the grace to so much worry. Instead of going to sleep as she might have done I was just smart enough to be happy over it.

Popendyke met us on the town side of the river. He seemed a trifle haggard I thought. He was not slow, on the other hand, to announce in horror-struck tones that I looked like a ghost.

"You must get those wet clothes off at once, Mr. Smart, and go to bed with a hot water bottle and ten grains of quinine. You'll be very ill if you don't. Put a bit more elbow grease into those ears. May I tell a note on you. The you want Mr. Smart to die of pneumonia."

CHAPTER XIX.

I Meet Mrs. Titus.

W HILE we were crossing the muddy stream by secretary, his teeth chattering with cold and excitement, related the story of the night.

We were just starting off for the boat-house up the river, according to plans. Mrs. and Randolph and I with the two dogs, when the countess came down in a hackintosh and a pair of gaiters, and insisted upon going along with us. She said it wasn't fair to make you do all the work and all that sort of thing. While we were arguing with her, and it was getting so late that I feared we wouldn't be in time to meet you, we heard some one shouting on the opposite side of the river. The voice sounded something like Britton's, and the countess insisted that there had been an accident and that you were hurt, Mr. Smart, and nothing would do but we must send Mrs. and Randolph over to see what the trouble was. It was raining cats and dogs, and I realized that it would be impossible for you to get a boatman on that side at that hour of the night.

It was nearly 1, so I sent the two Schmucks across. I've never seen a night as dark as it was. The two lit the lanterns holding in the boat could hardly be seen through the torrents of rain, and it was next to impossible to see the lights on the opposite landing stage—just a dim, misty glow.

"To make the story short, Mrs. Titus and her sons were over there, with absolutely no means of crossing the river. It took two trips over to fetch the whole party across. Raining pitch forks all the time, you understand. Mrs. Titus was forming at the mouth because you don't own a yacht or at least a launch with a canopy top or a thousand body or something of the sort.

"I didn't have much of a chance to converse with her. The countess tried to get her upstairs in the east wing, but she wouldn't climb another step. I forgot to mention that the windlass was out of order and she had to climb the hill in mud six inches deep. The Schmucks carried her the last half of the distance. She insisted on sleeping in the hall or the study, anywhere but upstairs. I assumed the responsibility of putting her in your bed, sir. It was either that or—"

I broke in sarcastically. "You couldn't have put her into your bed I suppose."

"Not very handsly, Mr. Smart," he said in an injured voice. "One of her sons occupied my bed, of course it was all right, because I didn't intend to go to bed, as it happened. The older son went upstairs with the countess. She gave up her bed to him and then she and I sat up all night in the study waiting for a telephone message from you. The younger son explained a good many things to us that his mother absolutely refused to discuss. She was so mad when she got here. It seems she took it into her head at the last minute to charter a special train. But forget to notify us of the switch in the plans. She traveled by the regular train from Paris to some place along the line, where she got out and waited for the special which was following along behind, straight from Paris too. A awful waste of money. It seemed to me, Her idea was to throw a couple of plain clothes men off the track, and, by George, sir, she succeeded. They thought she was changing from a train to some place in Switzerland and went off to watch the other station. Then she sneaked aboard the special, which was chartered clear through to Vienna. See how clever she is? If they followed on the next train or telegraphed it would not really be to Vienna. She got off at this place, and—well, we have her with us, sir, as snug as a bug in a rug."

"What is she like, Fred?" I inquired. I confess that I hung on his reply.

"I have never seen a wet hen, but I should say on a guess that she's a good bit like one. Perhaps when she's thoroughly dried out she may not be so bad, but"—he drew a long, deep breath—"but upon my word of honor she was the limit last night. Of course one couldn't expect her to be exactly gracious, with her hair plastered over her face and her hat spoiled and her clothes soaked, but there was really no excuse for some of the things she said to me. I shall overlook them for your sake and for the countess." He was painfully red in the face.

"The conditions, Fred," I said, "were scarcely conducive to polite persiflage."

"But, hang it all, I was as wet as she was," he exploded so violently that I knew his soul must have tried to the utmost.

"We must try to make the best of it," I said. "It will not be for long." The thought of it somehow sent my heart back to its lowest level.

He was glum and silent for a few minutes. Then he said, as if the thought had been on his mind for some hours: "She isn't a dry over forty-five. It doesn't seem possible, with a six foot son twenty-six years old."

Grithly I explained. "They marry quite young when it's for money, Fred."

"I suppose that's it," he sighed. "I fancy she's handsome too, when she hasn't been ruined upon."

We were halfway up the slope when he announced nervously that all of my dry clothing was in the closet off my bedroom and could not be got at under any circumstance.

"But," he said, "I have laid out my best frock coat and trousers for you and a complete change of linen. You are quite welcome to anything I possess. Mr. Smart. I think if you take a couple of rods at the bottom of the trousers they'll be presentable. The coat may be a little long for you, but—"

My loud laughter cut him short.

"It's the best I could do," he said in an aggrieved voice.

I had a secret hope that the countess would be in the courtyard to welcome me, but I was disappointed. I had to meet me and wait over me, as if I was not already sufficiently moist. The chief came running out to say that breakfast would be ready for me where I desired it. Hitchford felt of my coat sleeve and told me that I was quite wet. Hawkes had two large steaming towels waiting for us in the vestibule, apparently fearing that we could get no farther without the aid of a stimulant. But there was no sign of a single Titus.

Later I ventured forth in Popendyke's best suit of clothes, the one he uses when he passes the plate on Sundays in faraway Youkers. It smelled of moth balls, but it was gloriously dry, so why carp? We sneaked down the corridor past my own bedroom door and stole into the study.

Just inside the door I stopped in amazement. The countess was sound asleep in my big armchair, a forlorn but lovely thing in a pink negligee. Her rumpled brown hair curled in the angle of the chair, her hands dropped listlessly at her sides, dark lashes lay upon the soft white cheeks, her lips were parted over so slightly, and her bosom rose and fell in the long swell of perfect repose.

Popendyke clutched me by the arm and drew me toward the door or I might have stood there transfixed for heaven knows how long.

"She's asleep," he whispered.

It was the second time in twelve hours that some one had intimated that I was blind.

The door creaked ominously. The gaunt, ecclesiastical tails of my borrowed frock coat were on the verge of being surely outside with me when she cried out, whereupon I swiftly transposed myself and stuck my head through the half open door.

"Oh, it's you!" she cried in a quavery voice. She was leaning forward in the chair, her eyes wide open and eager.

I advanced into the room. A look of doubt sprang into her face. She stared for a moment and then rather pitifully rubbed her eyes.

"Yes, it is I," said I, spreading my arms in such a way that my hands emerged from the confines of Popendyke's sleeves. Upon my word, I had no idea that he was so much longer than I. "It is still I, countess, despite the shrinkage."

"The shrinkage?" she murmured, slowly sliding out of the chair. As she moved her cramped legs she made a little grimace of pain, but smiled as she looked toward me, her hand extended.

"Yes, I always shrink when I get wet," I explained, resorting to face countenance.

Then I bent over her hand and kissed it. As I neglected to release it at

THINGS TO FORGET.

If you see a tall fellow ahead of a crowd,
A leader of men marching east and west,
And you know at tale whose name is telling aloud,
Would cause his proud head to be in anguish he bowed,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.
If you know of a skeleton hidden away
In a closet, and guarded, and kept from the day
In the dark, and whose sawing whose sudden display
Would cause grief and sorrow and life long dismay,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.
If you know of a thing that will darken the joy
Of a man or a woman, a girl or a boy,
That will wipe out a smile, or the east way away
A fellow, or cause and gladness or joy,
It's a pretty good plan to forget it.

IN OLD KENTUCKY

A man in Henderson drove to town with a shotgun in his bag. He sees a man on street, tells him he is a good fellow, cuts loose with a shot, and says, "I'm out." The man is arrested in the street and in default of bond is sent to jail when he is charged with a charge of shooting a man who shot him. The man who did the shooting is released a $100 bond. In fact, Mr. Caskrell, a gentleman, a gentleman of best quality, a son of a United States Senator, shot a man and seriously injured him, but he regrets the crime and gets off with a fine. And yet we Kentucky men when they say that they are shooting is regarded as a joke. —Frankfort Journal

HE MUST BE RIGHT.

President Wilson must be right, in his views upon national defense. Mr. Bryan has announced his opposition to his measures and the Chicago Tribune, one of the bellweathers of republicanism, jumps upon him by saying his ideas are inspired by political ideas, looking toward the 1916 elections.

When a man can gain the opposition of two such extremes as Mr. Bryan and the Tribune, he can count on being lucky, and also have faith that the rank and file of our population will support him heartily. It seems as though some men cannot help but be successful in everything they undertake.

NEWEST DESIGNS IN SKIRTS

Varying Degrees of Width, According to the Material Employed—All Shapes of Pockets Used.

The widths of the new separate skirts vary to quite a degree, depending upon the material used. Simple tailored skirts of heavy fabrics average from two to two and a half yards in width, while some dressier skirts measure three yards. They escape the ground from three to five inches. Simple skirts are in plaited designs, with the plaits placed at the side, back or front, or in clusters in side or box plaits. Modified circular skirts are worn, as well as skirts shirred on at the waist line with the fullness at the sides and back. An outside belt at the normal waist line will continue to be used, frequently made of self-material, sometimes extending down the sides, forming pockets. Some skirts have two belts, one at the normal waist line and one slightly below. All shapes of pockets are used, some being embroidered or trimmed with braid.

Among the dressy designs are the two and three-tiered skirts, some in rindigote effect and others with a slight drapery suggestion. Skirts of serge with underpetticoats of satin or taffeta are smart, as well as skirts of serge gabardine or broadcloth, made in flounce effect with taffeta or velvet bands. Combinations of plaid and striped silk are also used. Other favored materials are satins, failles, taffetas, velvet cords, velveteens, broadcloth, serge, whipcord, poplin, tweeds, checks, plaids and stripes. Dark colors are the most prominent.

GIFTS TO PLEASE THE BRIDE

Many Simple and Inexpensive Presents That Will Be Sure to Be Appreciated.

Young girls often want to make a wedding gift that is not expensive and yet they want it to be in perfect taste and, if possible, not duplicated.

One girl has made a habit of giving a guest book or register for the new home. These can be found at a leather and novelty shop for $5. They come in all colors and when marked in gift with the name or initials make a gift sure to be enjoyed and appreciated.

Another girl says she has given several little flat, solid gold lead pencils to be carried in the gold mesh bag or purse. These also at the most famous of jewelers sell for $5, and when sent in the choicest of wrappings are certainly dainty gifts.

And a third young woman, who has made a study of appropriate and appreciated wedding gifts, claims that the little, apparently insignificant things such as sugar tongs, mustard spoons, butter ball picks, tea balls, etc., are frequently missing from a collection of gifts, so she confines her remembrances to these.

A set of the heavy bronze or metal book ends, so artistic and decorative, have been sent to brides lately and they were welcome.

Gifts That Girls Will Enjoy

Collar and Cuff Set for Christmas

Quaker collar and cuff sets of original design are easily made and among the most fashionable of dress accessories. They make charming Christmas gifts, and may be made at small cost.

Steele materials in cotton or linen, are used to make them, with hem-stitching, narrow fingered lines or embroidery in small sprays forming the decorative features. A quaker set edged with clay lace is shown in the picture.

Gauze Bag Holding Puff Balls

Game bags, made to hold individual and powder puff balls are among the popular new fads that make lovely Christmas gifts. They are made of children silk muslin or rayon, gathered over a silk-covered embroidery hoop. Banners of light satin ribbon are fastened at each side of the hoop with a rosette.

The balls, of absorbent cotton, are fastened with tiny bows of baby ribbon matching the banners in color. As soon as used they are thrown away.

Flowered silk muslin makes pretty bags with ribbon banners making the flowers in color. The little bows are sewed to the balls. The bags hang at the side of the dressing case for the convenience of guests.

Calendar and Hatpin Holder

An attractive calendar for a girl's room and a hatpin holder are shown in the picture above. The hatpin holder is a small pasteboard tube covered with white ribbon with tiny green bows and stripes of a narrow ribbon. It simulates a golf bag and a hatpin holder a golf stick with it.

The calendar consists of a circular piece having two small feet on one edge, cut from a sheet of celluloid. Two small oblong openings, one long or thin the other, are cut opposite the feet.

The face of the calendar is decorated with a painted holly wreath and gilt lettering within it.

Two smaller circles swing on a pivot back of the calendar's face, with the names of the months on one and numerals from 1 to 31 on the other. The tiny pivot is concealed by the lettering.

The calendar is supported like an easel by a strip fastened on at the back.

Will You Read This Twice?

A very important question to-day which every housekeeper must decide for herself is whether she prefers pure, cream of tartar baking powder like Royal or whether she is willing to use baking powder made of inferior substitutes which do not add healthful qualities to the food.

One kind is easily distinguished from the other. Since the laws of various States require the ingredients to be printed upon the label. If anyone is in doubt which kind is most healthful, it is worth while to ask the family doctor. Then decide.

And when once a decision is reached let no advertisement or dealer's argument or canvasser's solicitation change the decision. It is not a question of a few cents or of pleasing a salesman. It is a question of health.

If this appeals to you as reasonable and sensible advice, it is worth reading twice. And it is worth remembering.

CATTLE DISEASES COST STATE $133,000.

Bulletin No. 17, issued by the State department of agriculture, tells the story of "foot and mouth disease," which has gradually exterminated eleven hoofed animals from all per cent of the land occupied by civilized people.

It exists in Germany, France, Belgium, Denmark, Brazil, Argentina, the Philippines, Japan, China, and sections of Africa. While in the United States a fight extending over a year has driven it from nearly a score of States and left infection only in one county in Massachusetts and a large area of Illinois.

The outbreak a year ago cost $1,000,000 in the United States to stock raisers, and it cost Kentucky $133,564.55. The cost in Kentucky was apportioned as follows: Jefferson county, $83,397; Hardin, $11,734.25; Woodford, $1,500.40; Madison, $6,172.00; Scott, $1,000.00; Bullitt, $4,255.50; Jessamine, $2,278.00; Larnie, $1,761.00; Shelby, $1,104.75; Henry, $800.00; total, $150,000.

PHEASANT DISTRIBUTION

At Madison, 1915, a distribution of English pheasant pinnules was made by the Kentucky Game Commission. These birds were purchased in England and shipped to the United States where they were released in the state where they were received and separated into three groups: (1) a group of 100 birds, which were released in Kentucky; (2) a group of 100 birds, which were released in Pennsylvania; and (3) a group of 100 birds, which were released in Ohio.

The birds, of absorbent cotton, are fastened with tiny bows of baby ribbon matching the banners in color. As soon as used they are thrown away.

SCREENS ON FEEDING TROUGH

Prevents Waste and Contamination of Food in Poultry—All Fowls Partake and Share Equally.

It is common to get at the trough and find the chickens and other fowls are not allowed to eat the food but if they are fed by some means, they not only eat the food but the habit of cleanliness is spread. If it is in the chicken yard, a simple of chickens can be fed in this manner.

Chicken Feed Trough.

Other birds away to a trough and prevent them from getting the food. The trough with a screen prevents all this. The food is placed on and when it is through the lid is placed at the trough top and in this manner the chickens get the same food.

EARLY WINTER LAYING HENS

Can Be Accomplished by Early Hatch and Proper Feeding of Pullets in Early Fall.

The early laying hens rarely lay until the winter or early spring. If they are expected to lay in the late fall or early winter, it is often difficult to get them to lay. This can be done, however, by proper feeding and proper care. If the pullets are fed properly, they will lay earlier and more abundantly.

It should be separated as soon as possible. If they are at all crowded, they will not lay. If they are at all crowded, they will not lay. If they are at all crowded, they will not lay.

Infertile eggs have been found in the market. They are not good for eating and they are a waste of money. Farmers should be careful to select fertile eggs.

Ways for Fat Hens.

When certain individuals are overfed, they become fat. This is not good for them. They should be fed properly to keep them in good health.

Only Fresh Meat.

Only fresh meat should be fed to the chickens. Stale meat is not good for them and it can make them sick.
